ABSTRACT: The dialectical formations undertook by Aristotle on Topics – predicables – became instruments for a study which aimed to map the process of production of sense. This article, thus, has as a main objective to present our study on Sense. Hence, the theories which seem to be functional and/or applicable to our purpose will be brought together, offering a reference of theoretical positions which corroborate our researches. The possibility of apprehending sense, in the studies of Analysis of Speech, will be didactically introduced by using the categories of thought as they were stipulated by Aristotle. Developed in order to strengthen the use of arguments, in our research, the categories of definition, proprium, genus and accident will make possible to reveal the basic operations of the speech.
